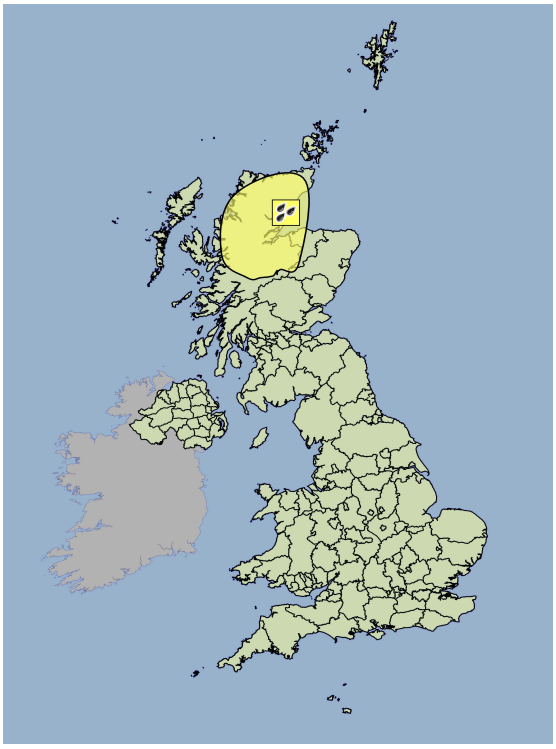
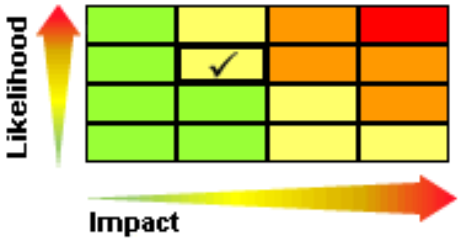
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Fronts on the western flank of a deep low moving into Norway will bring heavy rain on Tuesday afternoon before clearing to showers during the evening. Above 300 metres snow, rather than rain, is likely to affect some higher routes, with up to 10 cm possible, mainly above 400 metres.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 13:00 on Tue, 02nd Feb 2016 until 18:00 on Tue, 02nd Feb 2016

Occasionally heavy rain will continue to affect parts of northern Scotland for the rest of the afternoon. The rain will become less persistent and more showery in nature by evening.

Please be aware of possible localised flooding and disruption to travel.

This warning has been updated to bring the south of the area further north, whilst bringing the expiry time forward to 1800.
